The 4518th Lift Infantry Regiment

The 4518th Lift Infantry (the Duke of Regina's Own Huscarles) Regiment is not an average unit in the Imperium; it is, however, representative. The unit had its origins in the upheaval of the Civil War (604 to 622), when the Spinward Marches were caught up in the aftermath of the First Frontier War, the seizure of power by Grand Admiral Olav hault-Plankwell, and then the battles of the Second Frontier War. In those years of strife, Baron Caranda of Regina was steadfast in his support of the Imperium, often finding himself in the minority as acrimonious debate centered on the Imperium's lack of defense for the Marches, and later on its lack of cohesiveness in the face of Admiral hault-Plankwell's coup.

When the Second Frontier War ended in an Imperial victory, Admiral Arbellatra Alkhalikoi led her own fleet from the Marches to the core to end the Civil War. Her defeat of the Central Fleet under Gustus at the Battle of Zhimaway (622) established her as firmly in charge of the Imperium. But before leaving for the core of the Imperium, she left the Marches in the hands of a few loyal nobles, Caranda among them. Although only a baron, he controlled the crucial world of Regina and he was charged to continue to hold it for the Imperium. To reinforce Caranda's troops, Admiral Alkhalikoi left behind a small cadre of Imperial Marines. Those marines formed the beginnings of the Huscarles.

Baron Caranda proceeded to suppress local cliques disloyal to the Imperium. Looking back across the centuries, it is difficult to say what the exact nature of their disloyalty was, except that they lost and that Caranda won. The imperial Marines under his control fulfilled three functions: they served as his personal and household guard; they trained other forces in effective combat techniques; and they worked as special commandos in crucial operations.

The single most striking use of the Huscarles took place in early 623. After Admiral Alkhalikoi's victory over the rebels at Zhimaway, she was proclaimed Regent until an appropriate heir to the throne could be located. When news of Arbellatra's victory reached the Marches (after nearly a year in transit), some worlds did not accept the rebel defeat. Menorb was one such world, and it fell to Baron Caranda to enforce acceptance.

Embarking the 1st and 3rd Battalions of the Huscarles aboard transports of the subsector fleet, he approached the Menorb system, arriving at extreme distance. Small unit task forces then flew to Menorb's starport aboard two subsidized merchants as a clandestine advance party. Their reconaissance provided the necessary information to their comrades at the fringes of the system. When the right time came, they struck. The 1st Battalion arrived as jump troops, using individual jump capsules for a meteoric assault from orbit. Third battalion, minus its advance party, moved forward to close orbit, ready to react if needed. The assault was swift and sure, taking out Menorb's communications centers and the bureaucratic offices in the capital. A few recalcitrant bureaucrats lost their lives, but the action was essentially bloodless. With the governmental offices in the hands of the Huscarles, Menorb fell to Caranda and the loyalists.

The Regent Arbellatra was aware of her supporters in the Marches, and of the value of their support. Caranda was named a Marquis within days of Arbellatra's assumption of the Regency (the official patent of nobility was forwarded by special courier, and arrived thirty-six weeks later). Marquis Caranda attended the coronation ceremonies for Arbellatra in 629, and received his patent as a Grand and Noble Duke of the Imperium from her hand personally the next day.

In the years of peace and consolidation after the Civil War, Duke Caranda converted the Imperial Marines under his control to his own personal bodyguard. The 4518th Lift Infantry traces its lineage from this point.

The exploits of the Huscarles over the centuries have been representative of military operations in the Spinward Marches. Various battalions served in operations throughout the sector, including civil engineering efforts, anti-piracy campaigns, and a few pacification operations. In the 9th Century, anti-psionic battalions were raised and committed to the suppression of the Psionic Institutes. During the Third Frontier War, the entire regiment was committed to the Jewell subsector, serving on Foelen and Farreach.

With the outbreak of the Solomani Rim War, the regiment participated in the apprehension and segregation of Solomani exiles in the Marches, and to the operation of detention camps until the hostilities ceased. In the Fourth Frontier War, the Huscarles were one of the few non-Imperial units ready for action when the war broke out. The Duke of Regina consented to the imperialization of the entire regiment, and it served on Menorb, Boughene, and Pixie.

In the Fifth Frontier War, the regiment was expanded to six battalions (three lift infantry, two lift cavalry, and one jump troops) and operated on Forboldn, Alell, Efate, and Victoria. The Duke of Regina, as commander-in-chief of the forces in the Marches, treated the 4518th as his personal troubleshooters, committing them as elite forces in special commando operations, and (after the war) in small clean-up operations.

REGIMENTAL ORGANIZATION

As originally organized, the regiment consisted of four battalions (two lift infantry, one jump troops, and one lift cavalry). This organization varied as time passed; individual battalions were redesignated as military doctrine changed. While the first two battalions have always been lift infantry or jump troops, the others have been variously designated lift cavalry, grav tank, light infantry, ortillery (orbital artillery), antipsionic, and civil action battalions. In addition to its battalions, the regiment has always had a pursuit squadron as an integral component. The number of battalions in the regiment has ranged from three to seven.

The organization of the Huscarles is relatively simple: a regimental headquarters (commanded by a colonel) with staff and small headquarters company of about thirty troops, and a number of battalions reporting to the command.

The regimental headquarters maneuvers in three grav troop carriers fitted out for command functions; one is for the commanding officer, while the other two carry the substitute command post and the operations and intelligence command post. The HQ also has one heavy duty dual place fighter at its disposal for reconaissance and courier duties; it is normally maintained and supplied through the pursuit squadron.

Attached to the headquarters is an artillery battery essentially identical to the batteries integral to the lift infantry battalions. Doctrine dictates that artillery should never be held in reserve; if needed, it should be committed. The regimental artillery battery is available to support any subordinate which needs it.

The regimental medical section provides a centralized aid station and mobile hospital for the unit, including a triage officer and sanitation control.

The flight wing attached to the regiment consists of a fighter squadron of ten heavy duty fighters (with pilots and maintenance crews), plus an ortillery (orbital artillery) squadron with three 400-ton system defense boats and crews. If necessary, a transport squadron can be attached to the flight wing to carry the regiment interstellar.

LIFT INFANTRY BATTALION

The regiment has three lift infantry battalions: 1st, 2nd, and 4th. Each contains five companies.

Lift Infantry Companies: Alpha, Beta, and Gamma companies are lift infantry; each consists of three platoons.

A lift infantry platoon is formed of three squads, each with a grav APC carrying twelve troops, including the driver and squad leader. The platoon leader rides in a headquarters and support APC with ECM and firepower support capabilities. The platoon has four vehicles and 40 troops.

Grav Tank Company: Delta company is a grav tank unit; it is dedicated to firepower and maneuver in support of the lift infantry companies. The grav tank company has three platoons.

Each platoon consists of three grav tanks (each is a squad with a vehicle commander and three crew members), plus a command tank with the platoon leader, platoon sergeant, and standard vehicle crew.

The grav tank company is generally deployed as platoons, one platoon of tanks is attached to each company of lift infantry in the battalion.

Artillery Battery: Epsilon battery is artillery. It consists of two artillery sections of four vehicles each.

First section is armed with multiple rocket launchers.

Second section is armed with remote-controlled drone missiles.

Each section mounts its weapons on an APC chassis and has provision for a crew of five. A command element for each section consists of a section leader, a sergeant, and two technicians. Ammunition transport (with armored transport vehicles) is attached as needed.

The artillery battery responds with firepower to the needs of the battalion. The battalion commander determines the priority of fires between the companies. When heavy firepower is required, supporting fires from other battalions may be assigned.

The lift infantry battalion is the mainstay of the regiment. It provides the troop strength to take and hold ground, and that is the goal of every infantry unit.

The lift infantry battalion has 27 officers and 479 troops. It is entirely capable of transporting itself on any world surface using its own vehicles: 44 APCs, 13 grav tanks, and 8 artillery vehicles.

LIFT CAVALRY SQUADRON

The regiment has two lift cavalry squadrons: 3rd and 5th. Each has four troops. Squadron is the cavalry equivalent name for battalion; troop is the equivalent name for company.

Lift Cavalry Troops: All four troops in the squadron (Alpha, Beta, Gamma, and Delta) are lift cavalry. The entire squadron is a homogeneous unit of four identical troops, each of three lift cavalry platoons.

A lift cavalry platoon is formed of four squads. Each squad crews one vehicle. There are two grav tanks (with four crew members in each), one grav APC (with a crew of two, plus ten dismountable troops), and one firepower support APC (with five crew members, including the platoon leader and platoon sergeant). The platoon numbers four vehicles and 25 troops.

The lift cavalry squadron is the mobile firepower arm of the regiment. Its vehicles can provide support for any other forces within the regiment, and it can travel faster and farther than the other battalions of the unit. In combined operations, the lift cavalry is committed in support of specific units, usually one troop per battalion. The additional troops are held in reserve or sent on special missions. Lift cavalry does not, however, have enough troop strength to take and hold ground; it is ultimately dedicated to supporting the lift infantry.

The lift cavalry squadron contains 19 officers and 238 troops. There are 21 APCs and 21 grav tanks.

JUMP TROOPS BATTALION

The regiment has one jump troops battalion: the 6th. It contains four companies and two support platoons.

Jump Troops Company: Alpha, Beta, and Gamma companies are jump troops and contain three platoons each.

Each jump troop platoon contains three squadrons of ten soldiers each, plus a headquarters section of four (platoon leader, platoon sergeant, communications specialist, and runner). The unit is essentially trained to be independent and self-reliant; it has no vehicles or special equipment permanently assigned, but may be provided as necessary. All troops are trained to make encapsulated jumps from orbit.

Grav Tank Company: Delta company is the grav tank company. It is identical to the grav tank company in the lift infantry battalion. This tank company provides mobile fire support for the unit.

Artillery Platoon: The firepower platoon is a single section of multiple rocket launchers, plus the necessary support and fire

NOTES

APC (Armored Personnel Carrier): Standard grav troop carrier; carries ten plus driver and gunner. Headquarters use a command version with more sophisticated electronics; medical section used a medevac version with a mated air/raft; artillery uses a fire direction and control version.

Tank: Standard 20-ton turreted grav tank; carries a crew of four. Headquarters tanks carry a crew of six, which includes the unit leader and a sergeant.

Ship: Ortillery (orbital artillery) utilizes system defense boats for fire support.

Fighter: The fighter squadron utilizes single place fighters for operations. Dual place fighters are assigned to the squadron and regimental headquarters for command use, but are maintained at the fighter squadron.

MRL: Multiple Rocket Launchers are mounted on standard artillery grav APCs.

RDM: Remote-controlled Drone Missiles are mounted on standard artillery grav APCs.

TRANSPORTATION

Interplanetary and interstellar transport for the regiment is provided on an as-needed basis, depending on available shipping space and on priorities. The regiment is capable of moving itself anywhere on a planet surface using its own transportation assets (and elements with transport equipment would be tasked by headquarters to transport elements without such equipment).

Equipment for the regiment (computed based on vehicle tonnages plus one ton per trooper or officer) requires 7457 tons. Transportation tonnage for the personnel requires 5656 tons at standard rates (one stateroom per officer; double occupancy for enlisted personnel), or 1323 tons for low passage.

direction equipment to enable the unit to adequately support operations. This platoon is essentially identical to the MRL section of the artillery battery.

Support Platoon: The support platoon provides supply and administration for the unit. Its most important duty is the maintenance and support of the assault capsules that the unit uses for orbital assaults.

The jump troops battalion is the elite commando force of the regiment. It falls to the jump troops to crack the hard missions and to do the dirty work of the initial assaults. It contains 27 officers and 423 troops. Largely dependent on supplementary transportation, it does have 10 APCs, 13 grav tanks, and 4 artillery vehicles.

REGIMENTAL EQUIPMENT

The equipment of the regiment is tech level 15 material common to Imperial forces.

Armored Personnel Carriers: The APC is a 12 ton grav vehicle with a pressurized interior and space for up to 14 persons (including driver and gunner), although it normally carries only ten troops. The vehicle is normally armed with six tac missiles and thirty smaller fire & forget missiles (warheads are a mixture of HE and flechette).

The command version is fitted with electronic and commo equipment and serves as a command and staff center during operations. The medevac version (unarmed) has an integral open air/raft which may be detached; the APC itself has a small medical station capable of emergency treatment and surgery. The FDC version is armed with a VRF gauss gun and is used by artillery command sections to direct fire. The fire support APC (in lift cavalry sections) carries superstructure racks of fire & forget missiles and a VRF gauss gun; it serves as a base of fire for the highly maneuverable lift cavalry elements of the regiment.

Grav Tank: The grav tank is a standard 20-ton anti-grav fighting vehicle with a turreted upper gun mount and capacity for a crew of four. Command versions have additional communications and electronics equipment and carry a sergeant and unit leader in addition to the normal crew. The command tank's main weapon (a fusion Y gun) is removed in order to accommodate them.

Artillery Vehicles: Artillery vehicles use the standard APC chassis fitted with multiple rocket launchers (MRL) which fire disposable packets of rockets for great firepower in small packages. They also utilize remotely controlled drone missiles.

System Defense Boats form the ortillery squadron for the regiment. Each 400-ton boat can strike from orbit with its laser batteries or missile racks, and each is capable of maneuvering to the surface, underwater, and in deep space. The squadron contains three SDBs, plus one jump shuttle for transferring boats between systems; additional jump shuttles may be made available if a more rapid transfer is required.

Fighters: The pursuit squadron is equipped with ten 15-ton TL 15 single place pursuit craft. It is their responsibility to protect the upper airspace for the regiment, as well as to pursue enemy craft when called for.

The regiment also has dual place fighters available for reconaissance and courier duties.

Transport Ships: The regiment does not normally have transport ships within its organization. When required, the navy is called upon to provide hulls which can transport the unit on interplanetary or interstellar missions.

4518th Lift Infantry Regiment (the Duke of Regina's Own Huscarles)

THE REGIMENTAL CREST

The current regimental crest for the 4518th Lift Infantry Regiment (the Duke of Regina's Own Huscarles) was authorized in the year 1000 by the Imperial Division of Heraldry, and reflects the history of the unit since its establishment. The emergent unicorn (called the Bridled Steed) refers to the constellation spanning the Chronor and Jewell subsectors, and recalls the locations in which Huscarles fought and died during the fierce battles of the Third Frontier War. The cutlass thrusting across the crest signifies that the unit was originally formed from Imperial Marine cadre; indeed, a majority of the unit's troop strength is still derived from marine veterans on temporary assignments. The Imperial sunburst at the upper right commemorates the unit's period of service during the opening days of the Fourth Frontier War. Finally, blazoned across the botton of the crest is the unit motto: Strike From Space. The phrase is taken from the jump troop's exploits on Menorb in the days immediately after the Civil War.

TEMPORARY DUTY

The 4518th Lift Infantry Regiment is supported through taxes and levies imposed by the Imperial bureaucracy. The methods by which it maintains its troop strength are more complex.

Imperial policy allows Imperial marines to transfer to the 4518th (or other local units) for a limited period of time. While serving with a local unit (on temporary duty), the soldier is paid by the local unit and subject to local unit discipline. A promotion of one grade (enlisted rank only) can be retained at the end of the temporary duty when the soldier returns to an Imperial unit; additional promotions are sometimes recognized, but a specific application must be made.

The local unit gains because it receives a trained soldier; one who can help teach current doctrine or techniques. Such individuals help strengthen a local unit that often depends on a small population for its recruits.

The Imperium gains in the arrangement too. The Imperial military payrolls are relieved of the soldier for the temporary duty period. The general quality of the non-Imperial forces is increased. The soldier gains valuable experience in the type of unit he or she is ultimately called upon to support. There is even a chance the soldier will gain combat experience; non-Imperial units often get involved in combat.
